

College Idea Sheet

We recognize that getting the truth out to college students about sexual purity can be challenging. In addition to the flyers on the website (in particular, “The Love Letter” and “Health Facts”), we have a few other suggestions to get you started. In the end, you will have to be creative and decide what will most effectively get students thinking about their choices.

One thing you can do is to put up posters on college community bulletin boards that have abstinence based messages. One good series is the Real Love Poster Series, available at www.lifecyclebooks.com. Just click on the “Sexuality: Posters” button once you get to the online catalog. Another eye-catching poster is their “Sexual Exposure Chart.” They also have a brochure entitled “Killer Sex.” If you act early, you might be able to get some funding from the college. If they give funding for student activities, you should ask for similar funding. If the administration denies your request, or stops you from posting or distributing literature, please just give us a call.

Once you have started to get students thinking about the topic, consider holding a panel discussion/debate on the topic of why to wait to have sex. Or, plan a rally, inviting speakers to give testimonies, and a local Christian band to play. Ask local churches to help sponsor and organize the event.

Plan to follow up your Day of Purity events with a Bible study on sexual purity.
